ABSTRACT

Each year, the Community College of Rhode Island attempts to measure its success in helping students enter the workforce or transfer to a university by surveying the previous year's graduates. This report presents survey statistics for the class of 2000 (response rate 80.5%, n=1,073). Highlights include: (1) 637 graduates were employed full time and 255 part time; (2) 411 graduates were continuing their education, more than half on a full-time basis; (3) 42% were attending Rhode Island College and 18% the University of Rhode Island; (4) 162 business administration graduates made an average salary of $32,444 per year; (5) 60 computer studies graduates made an average salary of $35,521 per year; (6) 18 dental hygiene graduates made an average of $46,974 per year; (7) 108 human services graduates, many of whom became teachers, made an average of $25,923 per year; (8) 238 liberal arts graduates made an average of $32,398 per year; (9) average engineering and technology graduate salaries have increased $7,966 since 1998, to $39,238; and (10) total degrees and certificates awarded by the college in 1999-2000 was 1,333, a decrease of 387 from 1994-1995. Salaries and job titles obtained are listed for each of the college's 28 programs. Appended are the survey and several comparative graphs. (EMH)

Introduction

Mai Donahue
Class of 1997

Educating the Rhode Island workforce....

Look around you. As you go through a typical day, notice the people around you. Notice the teachers in the schools and day care centers, the policemen and firefighters in your neighborhood, the health professionals in the hospitals and medical offices, the professionals in the office buildings, the computer specialists and technicians working in a variety of jobs in companies across the state, elected officials, your co-workers. Chances are, many of the people you depend upon every day have benefited from the Community College of Rhode Island. With an enrollment of 15,000 students each semester, CCRI touches the lives of most Rhode Island families.

Each year between 1,000 and 1,500 Rhode Island residents graduate from CCRI and thousands more come to the college to take a course or two as part of their lifelong learning endeavors. Our graduates total nearly 45,000, most of them living and working in this state. It could be said that they are the backbone of the Rhode Island economy – the company CEOs and lawyers, educators, health care professionals, technicians, manufacturers and service workers that keep the Ocean State afloat.

CCRI was established in 1964 to give all Rhode Islanders an opportunity to achieve their educational goals and remains committed to helping every student succeed. The college serves recent high school graduates, older adults looking for a new career, recent immigrants and businesses looking to give their employees the training they need to remain competitive in a global economy.

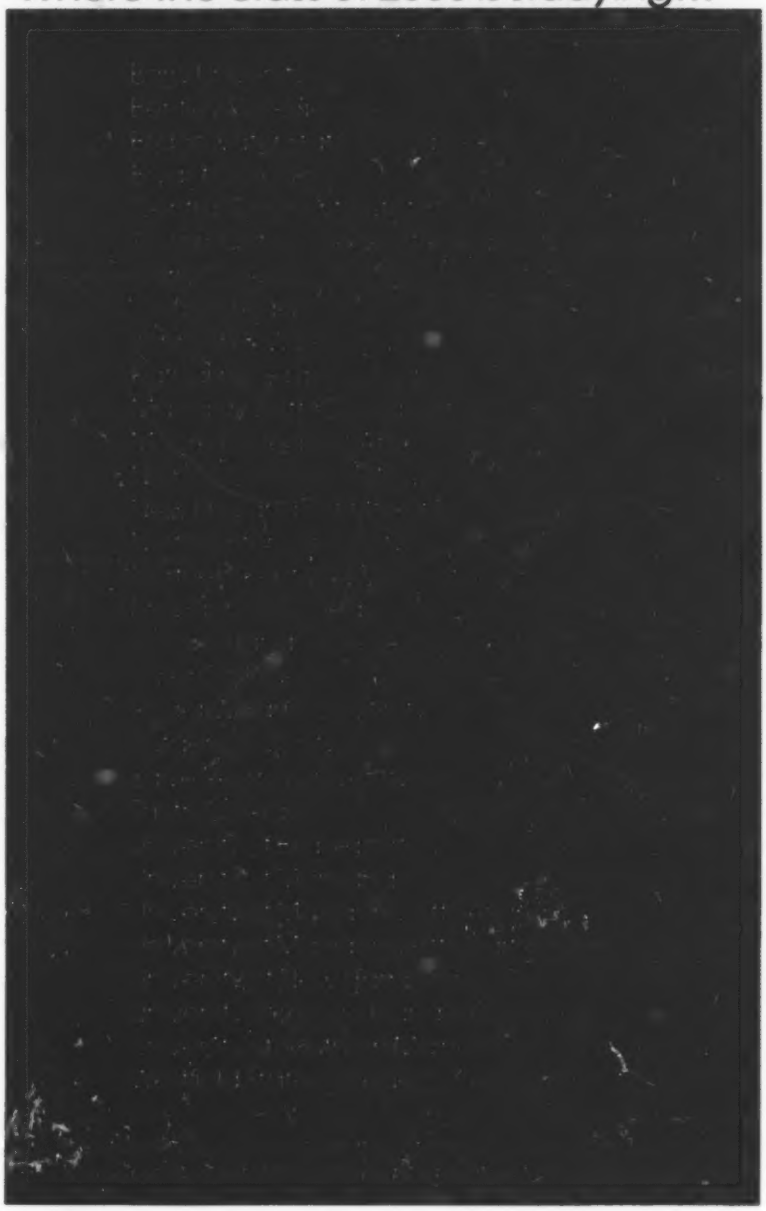
Where the class of 2000 is studying...



Meeting expectations...

CCRI's primary mission is to help students succeed in reaching their educational goals by preparing them to enter the workforce or transfer to a four-year college or university. Each year the college attempts to measure its success in this regard by surveying the previous year's graduates.

This year 1,333 members of the class of 2000 were asked to provide information about place of employment, job title, salary and status of continuing education. Of those, 1,073, or 80.5% responded to the survey. The results indicate that, overwhelmingly, CCRI graduates succeeded in reaching their educational goals. In fact, more than 95% are working in their field or continuing their education!

A total of 637 graduates are working full time, with another 255 employed on a part time basis (129 of those working part time are continuing their education on a full time basis); 411 graduates are continuing their education, 266 on a full time basis; 41.7% are attending Rhode Island College; and 18.4% are studying at the University of Rhode Island. In total, members of the class of 2000 transferred to more than 30 colleges and universities.

About this report ...

Since the Career Placement and Graduate Transfer Report is based on a self-report survey, some caution in interpretation is suggested. In looking at the data, please be advised that average salaries, based on a 40-hour week, are reported only for educational-related employment and may show an unexpectedly broad range due to data collected from both graduates in entry-level positions and professionally employed graduates who attended CCRI for further professional development.

The overall results from this year's survey again validates, as have all reports since 1985, CCRI's success in preparing graduates for further education as well as for jobs in the Rhode Island economy.
